Adding and Editing a Page

When a space is created, it will have a home page and a blog post by default.

If you are ready to add content click the “Create” button on the toolbar at the top of the page. After selecting the space and the type of content that you want to create, whether a blank page, blog post, or template click the “Create” button to add the content to your space. You’ll then be taken directly to the Confluence Editor so that you can continue creating content.

Click “Next” to learn how to create and edit content using the Confluence Editor.

You can now pre-populate a page with the Diagramly macro through the “Create” dialog. Simply select “Diagramly” as the page type during the page creation process.
